International Conference on System of Crop Intensification (ICSCI 2022) for Climate-Smart Livelihood and Nutritional Security

About SARR

The Society for Advancement of Rice Research (<http://sarr.co.in/>) is a registered society (2004) for researchers, research manager's, extension personnel, institutions, development agencies, trade and industry who practice and promote activities for the advancement of rice science and development. The society has been started with overall objectives of providing a platform for exchange of information and knowledge and disseminate the latest developments in rice research and to bring together all persons / institutions working for the cause of rice and rice based cropping systems. Laureates of rice science shared their views in different activities of the society in the conferences, brainstorming sessions, Annual Rice Group meetings organized by SARR.

About Conference

Innovation in food system is required for regional, national and global food security and sustainability. But experiences show that over dependence and reliance on intensive use of agrochemicals, fossil-fuels and other external inputs have put the sustainability of production system at risk. This has also severely affected the health of natural resources (soil, water, environment and food quality). Thus, there is an urgent need to rethink the choice of technology; practices; policies and strategies for innovations in sustainable crop production.

The use of agro-ecological approaches potentially reduce the dependence on external inputs, by mobilizing and invigorating the available biological processes and potentiality of plants and also the soil systems that support our crops in a sustainable manner. There is a significant and ever-increasing empirical evidence that shows that they are workable solutions for secured livelihood and welfare. The innovations in several food systems particularly, in crops like rice, has resulted in advantages not only in enhanced productivity but also in significant saving of water and energy, improved soil health, efficient biological imprints and a drastic reduction of GHG emissions, particularly methane from paddy fields.

The seeing-is-believing impact of System of Rice Intensification (SRI) in various crops has led to the universalization of SRI principles to other crops also. Today, a new paradigm of System of Crop Intensification (SCI) has emerged which improves the productivity and resilience of crops like wheat, finger millet, sugarcane, mustard, etc. SRI and SCI along with other practices such as conservation agriculture, natural farming, etc. are now put together as agroecological practices.

Agroecological/ SCI practices are particularly relevant for the resource-limited farmers because it relies minimally on purchased inputs, cash requirements and dependency on external resources. Experiences also show that by deployment of appropriate, customized mechanization, these methods can be scaled up for commercial production. The induced functioning of root systems and supporting beneficial life in the soil, and buffering capability of these practices on the ill effects of climate change such as drought, storm damage, extreme temperatures, pests and diseases, is shown to be feasible both on large as well as small farms. For food security and farm profitability in the 21st century, farmers will need to not only produce more food but also ensure a lighter and more benign 'footprint' on the environment.

There was gradual, but somewhat quite adaptation of these SCI principles/ methods within India and around the world, particularly in Asian countries. Many of these initiatives were inspired and encouraged by various efforts by many institutions and individuals who came together in organizing national conferences on SRI (e.g. Hyderabad-2006, Agartala, Tripura-2007 and Coimbatore-2008 and many other workshops) in which ICAR-IIRR participated and played a major role. The proposed International Conference ICSCI 2022 helps to build on the previous initiatives and experiences and provides platform to share the advances in the knowledge gain and know-how of the SCI/ SRI practices in the changing climate scenario by all the stakeholders.

Now, time is ripe for the world community of researchers, promoters, policy makers and others who are involved in improving, promoting and innovating Agro ecological practices, to come together, to consolidate and spread the knowledge and experience gained so far for the benefit of small and marginal farmers of the world.

Plenary Lectures

Globally and Nationally recognized scientists, policy makers and administrators will be invited to deliver special lectures on the topics related to System of Crop intensification and policy, farming systems research, climate change, resource conservation technologies, resource use efficiency etc. They will be requested to provide 2-3 pages' write-up of their presentation along with brief biodata for inclusion in the Pre-Conference Proceedings. Plenary lectures will be of 30 minutes duration. Full length papers will be published in the special issue of Journal of Rice Research.

Invited Lead Lectures

These would offer an insight into the various themes/sessions of the Conference. Technical Committees constituted for conference will identify 4 speakers. Each lecture will be of 15-20 minutes followed by discussion. Lead speakers of the symposium will be requested to provide 2 pages (2000 words) summary of their presentation and brief biodata for inclusion in the Pre-conference Proceedings. Full length papers will be published in the special issue of Journal of Rice Research.

Panel Discussion

Recognized scientists/policy makers, industrialists and farmers will be invited to discuss on the present status of SCI in different crops and technologies to mitigate climate change. Panel discussion will have 5-6 panelists and it will be of one hour thirty minutes duration.

Lightning Talk

All the delegates will get an opportunity to present their research findings by Lightning talk through physical/digital platform. Lightning talk will be arranged theme-wise. This would provide an opportunity to the participants to present their work in a more informal manner with personalized interaction with other participants.
